

PRESBYTERIANS VISIT PRESIDENT WILSON

Reception At White House
Marks Closing Session of Synod of Baltimore.

A reception by President Wilson at the White House, where he greeted the thirty-five delegates to the Presbyterian Synod of Baltimore, marked the closing session of that body today.

The Rev. Dr. Robert E. Davidson, of Falls Church, who was elected moderator, was in charge of the sixty-three ministerial delegates and thirty-two lay delegates. They returned from the White House to Eckington Church, where the final work of the convention was completed.

A home mission conference conducted by the Rev. Joel B. Hayden occupied most of the morning session today, and was followed by reports of committees on temperance, civility, Sabbath observance, the executive commission, trustees of the synod, and trustees of the West Nottingham Academy.

The home mission conference was divided into two discussions, the first pertaining to the proper way to approach the work of home missions, particularly in the parish and presbytery, and the second dealing with a lay leadership and its training.

The Rev. Dr. John McDowell, pastor of the Brown Memorial Church, of Baltimore, made a strong appeal for the churches to meet and solve the social questions of today, in an address before a popular meeting for home missions last night.

"The church must learn definitely what the social question is," said Dr. McDowell. "It must learn the relation of Christianity to the social question, and it must Christianize the thought of the social question."

"The demand of the day is for social legislation, and the church must face this demand, as it involves the destiny of the nation. The issue is, 'Who shall lead this great movement, Christ or Anti-Christ?'"

Following the return from the White House this afternoon the synod heard the reports of the committees on evangelism, church erection, and work in the army and navy. The rest of the afternoon will be taken up with routine work of the church body.

TEN INDICTED IN $500,000 SWINDLE

Whisky Long Paid For Not Yet
Delivered, Victims Tell
Authorities.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Whisky selling frauds aggregating $500,000 are described in indictments handed down by the Federal grand jury against Felix Prince, a brother of Municipal Court Judge Leo Prince; his uncle, Adolf Prince; Leonard Prince, another member of the family, and seven other defendants. The indictment accuses the defendants of violating the postal laws by using the mails to defraud liquor dealers.

The defendants are connected with the Overbrook Distilling and Distributing Company and the Seminole Distilling and Distributing Company. These concerns, according to Postoffice Inspectors Mayhew and Swain, did no distilling and so little distributing that many a liquor dealer has been waiting four years or more for the special brand whisky which he ordered from the company and paid for.

The inspectors arrested Adolf, Felix, and Leonard Prince and brought them before Judge William H. Sheppard in the United States District Court. Felix Prince was held in $5,000. The others were held in $3,000 each. All three furnished bonds. The other defendants, who are salesmen for the company, are out on selling trips.

The whisky frauds date back to 1907. It is alleged, when the Seminole Distilling and Distributing Company was formed, and Adolf Prince made its first president. The purchaser usually made a small cash payment and gave short time notes for the rest. When he asked for the delivery of his whisky, it is said, he was told to pay his notes.

When the notes were all paid the purchaser, it is alleged, sometimes received cheap whisky worth about half the price asked for the Seminole Club and Overbrook rye.

According to the inspectors, the company seldom delivered any whisky unless threatened with a lawsuit. In some cases it is charged the defendants even offered to get new licenses for dealers whose licenses had expired or had been revoked.
